HOUSTON, TEXAS

HOUSTON, TX

Houston, the fourth-largest city in the United States and largest city in Texas, has an estimated population of 2.2 million. Founded in 1836, Houston is home to the Texas Medical Center – the world’s largest concentration of healthcare and research institutions.

In 1963, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration’s (NASA’s) Manned Spacecraft Center, now known as Lyndon B. Johnson Space Center, opened and is the home of Mission Control Center, giving Houston its official nickname of “Space City.”

Houston is home to several professional sports teams including the Houston Astros of Major League Baseball (MLB), the Houston Texans of the National Football League (NFL), the Houston Rockets of the National Basketball Association (NBA) and the Houston Dynamo of Major League Soccer (MLS).
